Lesson Ideas for “Holiday Ideas Together”

Prepare

Use after the suggestions on page 107. Print one student page per pair, single-sided. An adult cuts out the two dashed response cards, keeping the picture board intact. Review the pictures from left to right: eat ice cream, take a photo, look for shells. Model both replies orally with a welcoming nod or a gentle head shake.

Suggest and reply

Partner A points to one picture and makes a suggestion with Let’s. Partner B chooses a response card, shows it and says its phrase. Return both cards to the table. Swap roles and choose another picture. Continue until both learners have suggested all three activities. The reply is a choice; neither card is a required answer.

Listen and respond

After Good idea, both learners may mime the activity while seated. After Sorry, I don’t want to, the proposer points to a different picture and makes a new suggestion. A learner may decline again; agreement is not compulsory. Then swap roles. This is imaginary holiday planning, not a request to eat or use equipment.

Model exchanges

B: “Good idea.”

A: “Let’s look for shells.”
B: “Sorry, I don’t want to.”
A: “Let’s eat ice cream.”
B: “Good idea.”

Other suggestions use the same three pictures. These examples model turn-taking, not fixed answers.

Speaking support and checking

Read the response cards aloud whenever needed. Learners can point to a card and echo the adult; independent reading is not required. Check that each suggestion matches the picture and the spoken reply matches the selected card. There is no written task or fixed answer key. Practise a friendly tone for both acceptance and refusal.

Support and vary

Begin with two pictures and teacher-led exchanges. Leave the response cards attached if cutting is inconvenient. For a new round, keep the cards face down; the responder draws one, turns it over and uses that reply in a clearly explained pretend role. Return and mix both cards after each exchange. Physical miming is optional.
